STILL GROVER'S PEN AVOIDS THE BILL

NO SIGNATURE FOR THE HYBRID MEASURE.

Deficiency Appropriation Bill Becomes a Law—Congress Will Be Kept in Session From Day to Day Until the Fate of the Tariff Bill Is Finally Decided.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24—The president signed the deficiency appropriation bill this morning, but no signature has been affixed to the tariff bill as yet to-day. The original copy of the tariff bill was returned to the President yesterday by Secretary Carlisle, in whose custody it has been since it was brought to the white house.

"Matters were in an unsatisfactory condition when I left the white house," remarked Speaker Crisp yesterday, "the President not having made up his mind in regard to the tariff bill. Inasmuch as the ten days fixed by law in which the bill can go on the statute books without the President's signature do not expire till Monday it has been deemed a safe course to keep congress in session until Tuesday. This will be done from day to day unless in the meantime the President should change his mind and either sign the tariff bill or veto it and send in a message giving his reasons for such action. As soon as it becomes known just what the fate of the tariff bill will be congress can be adjourned within an hour."

NO SENATE QUORUM.

Messages from the President Forced to Go Over.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Even before the reading of Wednesday's journal in the senate yesterday the absence of a quorum was pointed out by Senator Manderson, and the roll being called showed the presence of thirty-three senators, ten less than a quorum. Mr. Harris moved the sergeant-at-arms be directed to request the presence of absentees, but Mr. Pasco and Mr. Cockrell pointed out that the same order made Wednesday was still in force and the latter asked for the report of the sergeant-at-arms. This was dated Aug. 23 (yesterday) and reported that of the forty-two senators who failed to answer to their names Wednesday only two were in the city, and one of these (Mr. Voorhees) was to ill to attend. The other senators were telegraphed to attend immediately. Up till 12:35 only thirty-five senators had attended.

At the request of Mr. Gray the list of absentees was read. Mr. Harris then said the orders given Wednesday to the sergeant-at-arms to request the presence of senators having proved ineffective, he moved that the sergeant-at-arms be directed to compel their attendance, and this was agreed to.

While the senate was waiting for a quorum to appear, Mr. Pruden, the executive clerk from the white house, appeared with messages from the President, supposed to be nominations, but could not present them.

At 1:20 p. m., finding it impossible to get a quorum, the senate, on motion of Mr. Harris, adjourned until to-day at 12 o'clock.

BLOW AT CARNEGIE.

Naval Committee Reports on the Armor Plate Frauds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—About fifty members were on the floor when the house met yesterday. There was, as usual, a great rush on the part of the members for recognition to pass bills of local importance. Mr. Bynum (dem., Ind.) made the regular order. Thereupon Mr. Cummings, chairman of the committee on naval affairs, presented the report of the committee on the armor plate frauds. With it he presented a joint resolution to authorize and direct the secretary of the navy to remove from the Monadnock, the monitor Terror, the ships Oregon, Indiana and Massachusetts, and the cruiser Monterey certain specified armor plates and to subject them to the ballistic test at the Indian Head proving grounds. The resolution also directed a speedy report on these tests.

The resolution was adopted without division, and at 1:05 p. m. the house adjourned until to-day.

CARNEGIE SCORED.

Report of Mr. Cummings' Committee on the Armor-Plate Frauds.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 24.—Representative Amos J. Cummings, chairman of the house committee on naval affairs, presented to the house yesterday the preliminary report upon the investigation of the armor-plate and billets furnished to the government by the Carnegie Steel company. The investigation has been in progress for weeks and during its course testimony has been given by the principal officials of the Carnegie company, by workmen and by government officials. The report is a remarkably complete review of the case. The committee finds that charges of fraud have been sustained, scores the company severely and recommends that fifty-nine suspected plates in use should be tested as the only method of proving their fitness or unfitness. It only finds that the government inspection was negligent, but no charges of dishonesty rests upon the inspectors. Accompanying the report was a joint resolution to authorize and direct the secretary of the navy to remove from the Monadnock, the monitor Terror, the ships Oregon, Indiana and Massachusetts and the cruiser Monterey certain specified armor-plates and to subject them to the ballistic test at the Indian Head proving ground. The resolution also directed a speedy report on these tests.

COAL DOES NOT ADVANCE.

Miners' Wages Remain Stationary and They Will Not Strike.

TERRE HAUTE, Ind., Aug. 24.—There has been talk of a renewal of the miners' strike in this state Sept. 1, but careful inquiry shows that there is no likelihood of it. The selling price of Indiana coal is lower than it was a year ago this month, and as yet there is no announcement by the operators or wholesalers of the customary advance for the fall and winter, and inasmuch as the price of mining is not to be advanced there would not seem to be cause for an increase in the selling price. If the miners now understood that the operators intend to get more money for their coal the men who dig it would be more inclined to strike.

May Name Bryan for Senator.

GRAND RAPIDS, Neb., Aug. 24.—The populist state convention convenes here at 10 o'clock this morning. The leading candidates for first place are John M. Ragan and Judge Holcomb. All the delegates are present. A full ticket is to be named and also a United States senator. All the party does not favor this last idea, but it will be carried through. The probabilities are that they will nominate Congressman Bryan if he will wholly renounce his connection with the democratic party.

ST. JOHN TESTIFIED FOR THE OWNERS

STORY OF THE STRIKE BY ROCK ISLAND MANAGER.

The Contract with Pullman—Railroad Companies Not Obliged to Run Sleeping Cars Except at Their Own Discretion—Details of the Inquiry.

CHICAGO, Aug. 24.—General Manager John A. St. John of the Rock Island Railway company, testified before the labor commission yesterday.

With regard to the deputy marshals, Mr. St. John flatly contradicted Chief Deputy Marshal Donnelly, who testified Wednesday. Mr. Donnelly said that some four thousand men were sworn in as deputy marshals at the request of the railway companies; that they were under the command of the railway companies and were paid by them and that the United States marshal had nothing to do with them after swearing them in.

Mr. St. John swore that the United States marshal requested his company to furnish men to act as deputies; that his company's officials exercised no control over the deputies and did not know what they were doing; that the deputies did not report to any officer of the Rock Island company, and that the company had not paid and did not expect to pay any of these deputies, but supposed the government would pay them.

Replying to Chairman Wright Mr. St. John said that his company owned and controlled 3,570 miles of track, and that the employes of the company numbered 12,117.

"Please state in your own way what you know of the recent difficulty over the strike and boycott, and the events that occurred," said Mr. Wright.

"To relate all the events is not in the power of any one man," replied Mr. St. John. "The report of the matter in which a brief of the occurrences is set out for the use of our company makes a book of more than 2,000 pages. I have had prepared a short statement which I will read to you," and Mr. St. John took from his pocket a bulky typewritten document,

"Please do so, and then file it with the commission," said Mr. Right.

"Before proceeding," said Mr. St. John, "I desire to correct an error which seems to have gotten abroad some way to the effect that this trouble was a strike on the Rock Island and Illinois Central roads. Such is not the case. There was no trouble on the Rock Island until two days before the strike and the company had received no notice from the men of intention to refuse to handle Pullman cars.

"The trouble on the Rock Island road began at Blue Island on June 29," Mr. St. John went on to read. "That night there was a meeting in a hall at Blue Island, when it was voted to order a strike on the Rock Island. Speeches were made by Mr. Debs and others. Of the 400 men at the meeting not more than one-third were employes of the Rock Island."

Mr. St. John gave the names of a score or more of men who were not railroad men but were engaged in other occupations at Blue Island. Among these were brickmaker, saloonkeepers, bartenders, tailors, plumbers and men of other trades. Mr. St. John recited how the first train was stopped at Blue Island on June 29 by the flagmen and gatemen leaving their posts. The strike was inaugurated on the Blue Island at 7 o'clock June 30. A train which attempted to pass was stopped by the mob and the engineer and fireman were dragged from the engine. Cars were overturned, switches were turned and spiked and coaches were run to the dislocated tracks.

On July 1 a mob went to the railway shops and told the men there to come out, as this was a fight between labor and capital. After this all attempts to run trains were abandoned, and Mr. St. John gave the commission the list of the annulled trains.

At this point in his examination Mr. St. John was excused till 1:30, when he was interrogated with regard to the General Managers' association.

Manager St. John concluded by stating that his road was not obliged by contract to run Pullman cars.

Assistant Fire Chief Joseph L. Kenyon was the next witness. He told how a number of cars were burned during the strike. On July 6, 622 cars were burned on the Panhandle tracks near Fifty-fifth street, remote from water, which handicapped the department. On the same day 141 cars were burned on the Illinois Central tracks near Ninety-ninth street and thirteen cars were destroyed on the Rock Island tracks near Ninety-second street. On July 7 one car was burned on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy tracks and two on the Illinois Central tracks. On July 9 and 10 some few cars were burned.

We favor the use of both silver and gold as money at a ratio of 16 to 1, confining the coinage of silver to the American product at the net cost of the actual expense of coinage, and we demand that silver as well as gold should be a legal tender for the payment of all debts both public and private, and we pledge the congressional nominess of this convention to support the principles herein contained."

INGALLS MET DEATH IN A WRECKED CAR

JANESVILLE MAN KILLED IN FORT ATKINSON.

Railroad Men Find That One of the Three Who Were Buried by Lumber in the C. & N. W. Wreck Was a Well Known Bower City Man.

Thomas Ingalls of this city, proves to be one of the three men killed in the Fort Atkinson wreck. This was developed when his brother arrived in the city last evening, called from his bench in the C. & N. W. shops at Baraboo by a dispatch announcing his brother's death. Ingalls was a son of Mrs. Agnes Ingalls, who resides with her daughter, Mrs. W. H. Corneau, 104 North Bluff street.

Ingalls left a wife, two brothers and three sisters: W. F. Ingalls, of Baraboo; Charles G. Ingalls, of St. Paul; Mrs. W. H. Corneau, of this city; Mrs Thomas Kneeland, who resides near Madison, and Mrs. Jessie Mullen, of Campbell, Minnesota.

A Chicago dispatch says Ingalls had been acting for some time as a detective, and it is supposed he was "shadowing" the men who were stealing a ride in the car that was crushed. There were seven of the men in a lumber car. They occupied a space behind the lumber in the end of the car. When the car was derailed the lumber shifted and crushed three to death, wounding another so he died soon after. The names of the killed are as follows:

Thomas Ingalls, about 40 years old, whose wife lives at 427 West Madison street, Chicago.

Charles Klein, aged about 30, whose mother and wife live somewhere in Chicago.

Stephen Ontke, between 40 and 50, who leaves a wife in Austin and a son in Chicago.

The injured are as follows:

S. W. Waterman, of 892 West Polk street, Chicago, said to be married; badly injured about the head, will recover.

George Plant, of Chicago, bruised, not severely.

James G. Eggleston, also of Chicago; long gash in his left side; able to be about.

The man who escaped uninjured was Robert Harsagke.

The train was running twenty miles an hour when the axle of the lumber car broke, causing the wreck.

Ingalls has been a private detective in Chicago for several years, being known sometimes as William a Howard and sometimes as William A. Hadley. He was a particular friend of Sergeant McDonald, Detective Woodruff and other well known officers They saw him alive and well Wednesday, and refused to believe he could be the man who was dead.

He was at his home Wednesday evening for a short time, and went away without saying when he would be back or where he was going to. He might have reached Fort Atkinson in an attempt to follow and shadow the men who were stealing a ride on the train; but this his friends claimed to have been impossible and last night they refused to believe that he was dead.

Ingalls was remembered by Chicago dog fanciers, says the Herald, through the exhibition of his big St. Bernard, Rose, at the last dog show. He was employed at one time, it was said, by the police, at Field & Leiter's as an expert "spotter" and he had told one of the officers last week that he was doing private work for Marshal Field. He was a popular man on West Madison street.

Mrs. Ingalls received a telegram early last evening from J. A. Emery, coroner at Fort Atkinson, who informed her of the death of Ingalls and inquired if he should ship the body to her at once.

At first she would not believe her husband was the man but she came up from Chicago at noon today and fully identified the remains. The body was brought from Fort Atkinson at 12:40 and was buried at 4 o'clock this afternoon in Oak Hill.

The other two men who were killed yesterday left Chicago only a few days ago bound for the Pacific coast hoping to benefit their health. How they came to be in a box car homeward bound nobody can explain.

Miss Kent is resting as well as could be expected

ATHLETICS DOWNED COLLEGIANS.

All Universities Couldn't Keep Up With the Janesville Ball Players.

People left Athletic park yesterday afternoon with a very low idea of the value of a college education. Nine intellectual young men with univeriity monograms on their sweaters and foot ball hair puffing out from beneath their jockey caps went down to defeat before the "gas-house" aggregation captained by crafty G. Wilbur. The visitors were recruited from the nines of six schools and colleges. Falk, of Stoughton, was in the box, and supplied a greater variety of curves than could be seen in a barrel-hoop factory. His support was not first class, however, and the catcher, Yates, was too light to stand punishment, although he showed good head work. The two runs made by the visitors were brought in by a home run batted in the first inning. McGinley was very effective, and Larson, who filled the box in the last two innings, also pitched good ball. Cute Roberts umpired. The score was:

Janesville	2	0	4	0	2	0	3	4	0	—15
Milwaukee	2	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	0	—2

The game that was to have been played with Detroit Tuesday is off. The league nine can't get here and the "fans" are downcast. The next game here will be with Rockford Sunday, September 2.

The Athletics played in Fort Atkinson today and the All Universities played in Edgerton.

One hundred and fifty Janesville people, mostly ladies, joined the Dells excursion party this morning, the train leaving here at 7:45 o'clock. The train started from Rockford, where one hundred and fifty tickets were sold. At Beloit they were joined by eighty Beloit people. When the train left Janesville there were thirteen coaches and one combination baggage car that made up the excursion train. All the cars were comfortably filled. Four coaches were assigned the Janesville party, cards being placed on each car with the word "Janesville." The train is scheduled to return to this city at 10 o'clock this evening.

HORSE KILLED BY AN ELEPHANT

Sheer Fright Resulted In the Instant Death of a Drayman's Animal.

As the elephants in the circus parade in Appleton, yesterday, was passing near the circus grounds, the horse of a local drayman stood shivering with fright. As they passed the horse, the huge tusker who wore the heavy harness of straps and chains, emitted a grunt and shook himself, whereupon the horse dropped as if shot, gave a convulsive shiver and was dead. He was plainly scared to death.

FIFTY WERE GUESTS OF MISS BOSTWICK

PLEASANT CARD PARTY GIVEN LAST EVENING.

The Affair Was in Honor of Miss Macon, of Alabama—Alfred Williams, the Well Known Baritone Heard in Several Solos—Those Who Were Present.

Fifty young people were most gracefully entertained by Miss Racine Bostwick at the home of her father, J. M. Bostwick, on Court street last evening. They filled the parlors and overflowed upon the broad porch which offered a cool resting place when the strife for progressive euchre honors had ended. The company was in honor of Miss Macon of Eufaula, Alabama. The first part of the evening was spent at six hand euchre and distinguished ability was rewarded by the presentation of a handsome sash to Miss Etta Hanchett and a box of silk handkerchiefs to Fred L. Clemons. Miss Maggie Mouat and Will A. Jackson carried off the booby prizes which were rich but not ostentatious.

Refreshments were served at little tables about the parlors and during the evening the guests enjoyed a musical treat of rare quality. Alfred Williams, the well-known Chicago baritone was called upon and responded with several numbers. His voice is of remarkable power and compass as well as singularly sweet and the applause that followed each song was enthusiastic. Those who were present were:

"My Uncles."

The term "my uncle's," as applied to a pawnbroker's shop, is said to be a pun on the Latin uncus, a hook. Pawnbrokers employed a hook to lift articles pawned before spouts were adopted. "Gone to the uncus," therefore is exactly tantamount to the more modern phrase, "up the spout." In French the concierge of a prison is called uncle because the prisoners are "kept there in pawn" by government. In the seventeenth century a usurer was called "my uncle" in the Walloon provinces because of his near connection with spendthrifts, called in Latin nepotes, nephews.

When Our Liver Reprimands Us

For our neglect of it by inflicting upon us sick headache, by dyeing the skin yellow, coating the tongue with fur, producing vertigo, pains in the right side and souring the breath, we are little less than lunatics if we disregard the chastisement. If we call Hostetter's Stomach Bitters to our aid, tranquility and health follow speedily, and with the departure of the symptoms mentioned, departs also irregularity of the bowels, which invariably attends disorder of the liver. In malarial complaints the liver is always involved, and it is a fortunate circumstance that this fine anti-bilious medicine is also the finest specific in existence for every form of malarial disease. Nor is it less efficacious for dyspepsia, failure of appetite and strength, nervousness and a rheumatic tendency. It renews the ability to sleep, and greatly promotes convalescence after wasting diseases.

HER MODEST WISHES.

If Nerve Counts, This Girl Ought to Be a Star.

A Chicago dramatic and theatrical agent received the following letter last week from one of the large array of stage struck girls:

"Dear Sir: I want to go on the stage very bad. I have been on the stage several times in home talent. I can sing a good many comical songs. I am a graceful waltzer, and also a pretty good roller skater. I have short, died, blond, curly hair that looks exactly like a wig, but I would wear a wig if necessary. I will not wear tights; I would rather never go on the stage than to do such a brazen thing as that. I would not even wear short dresses like they wear when they play pheasant parts. I don't know what salary I ought to command to start with. I hear that Fay Templeton gets $1,000 a week. I would be willing to accept a salary of $150 a week to start. I would want to be a star. I would not play any ugly parts. Will I have to bring a pet dog or parrot? Please answer all these questions and send for me as soon as you can get me the job. I don't think I can get ready much under a week or ten days. Will I have to smoke cigarettes? I am willing to pay you for all your trouble. If I have to take a stage name I think I'll take Fay Florinne Dulcerine. Yours truly and hopefully, "SALLY JONES."

THE MOTOR MAN'S RIGHT BOOT

It Is a Blessing to the Cobbler Because It Needs Such Repairs.

"It's an ill wind that blows nobody good," quoth the shoemaker as he tacked a sole on the motor man's right boot.

"Why so?" asked his nonagenarian visitor, who established his loafing headquarters in the shoemaker's shop.

"Well," said the repairer of heels and soles, "the electric cars have made business for me, though they made the horse dealers wince, 'tis said. You see there is now a gong under the motor man's right foot and in order to strike it the motor man must hit an iron attachment with the sole of his right boot. As the constant dripping of water wears away the stone, so the constant hammering of the gong causes the sole of the motor man's right boot to wear out. I do about twice the amount of repairing business for car men that I did in the old horse railroad days. I repair two right soles for every left sole. In making a pair of boots for a motor man I put twice as good stock in his right boot as I do in his left, and still nine times in ten the right boot is the first to wear out."

"And the world is getting queerer every day," said the nonagenarian, and he lighted his T. D. to see the smoke curl and think of his boyhood hours.

HALF HIS SKULL OFF BUT HE IS HAPPY

STARTLING CASE DEVELOPS DURING THE WRECK.

Waterman, One of the Survivors of the Fort Atkinson Smash-Up, Had the Top of His Head Lifted Off His Brain—Only the Skin Held It On.

W. H. Corneau returned from Fort Atkinson at noon, where he went this morning to claim the body of his brother-in-law, Thomas Ingles, who was killed in the railway wreck yesterday morning. Mr. Corneau was seen soon after his return by a Gazette reporter.

"Ingles was smothered to death in the wreck," he said. "The most peculiar case I ever heard of is that of Waterman, one of Ingles' companions. Waterman was struck on the head by some timbers. His head, or the top of his head, from a line drawn around just above the ears was lifted clear, being cut off except a small piece of skin just above the eyes. The skull was torn away from the brain and held between two timbers several inches from the rest of the head. Waterman not knowing that his skull was off tried to liberate himself, but was not successful. He was held in this position for over an hour, but was able to talk as if nothing ailed him. When liberated the doctors considered him fatally injured, but put his skull back in place. I saw that man this morning. He was feeling first rate, and intended to return to his home in Chicago this evening, his wife sending word that she would meet him this afternoon. The attending surgeon now says that Waterman will recover.

"All the men had plenty of money," continued Mr. Corneau, "but they were beating their way from place to place, looking for work. Ingles' presence with the crowd is not accounted for, except that he was shadowing some one."

GILLIGAN JUST AS YOUNG AS EVER

Runs Away From the Poor Farm and Gathers a Jag.

Andrew Gilligan was sent to the county poor house this morning for six months Gilligan is an old-time vagrant, and has been an inmate of the poor house for three years or more. It appears he does not take well to his confinement within the limits of the county farm, and takes every advantage to get into the city and fill up with whisky. Gilligan is well acquainted here, and has no trouble in obtaining all he wants to drink. In order to hold him at the farm it is necessary to commit him under warrants issued by the courts. He was accordingly taken before Judge Phelps this morning, and adjudged guilty on charge of being a vagrant, and was sent to the poor house for six months. Gilligan is about seventy years old.

PICTURES AND PAINTERS.

Holbein was only sixteen years old when first engaged in painting altar pieces for the churches in Basle.

Hogarth was an engraver, and before turning his attention to art, made his living by engraving coats of arms.

Durer was the son of a goldsmith, and, showing an appreciation of art, was apprenticed to a draughtsman.

Fra Bartolomeo was the intimate friend of Raphael, and is believed to have finished many pictures planned or sketched by the latter.

Orcagna's "Last Judgment," now in the Campo Santo at Pisa, was, in the fourteenth century, deemed the greatest picture in the world.

Tintoretto's real name was Jacozo Robusti. He was called Tintoretto from being the son of a dyer, the word Tintore having that meaning.

Van Dyck has never been surpassed in ability to draw the features and hands of sitters. There is as much character in his hands as in his faces.

Raphael's pictures are often so thinly painted that the pen strokes on the canvas made for the guidance of the painter are visible through the layers of color.

Cimabue's "Madonna," now in the church of St. Maria Novella in Florence, when finished, was carried from his house to the church in solemn procession, with bands of music and great pomp.

Murillo died of injuries caused by a fall from a scaffold in a church in Cadiz. He had just finished a picture and was admiring it, when, stepping backward to get a better view, he made a misstep and fell.

Michael Angelo was equally great as painter, sculptor, and architect. In order to paint figures properly he devoted twelve years to the study of anatomy alone. His monument to Pope Julius II. was on so grand a scale that the church of St. Peter in Rome was altered with a view to affording a suitable place for its reception. The tomb was afterward modified in plan and placed in another church. His "Last Judgment" required seven years to execute, and was finished when the artist was nearly seventy-eight.

CROPS FAR FROM BAD AROUND THE COUNTY

FARMERS HAPPY OVER THE PROSPECT.

There Has Been a Big Improvement in the Last Ten Days as Far as Corn and Tobacco are Concerned While the Grain Yield Is Heavy—Much Leaf Cut.

Nobody need worry about Rock county crops, according to all reports.

"I took a drive through the eastern and northern parts of the county yesterday," said W. T. Vankirk, "and am surprised at the bright prospect and good appearance of the crops. Corn and tobacco have improved greatly within the past ten days. Farmers are cutting tobacco in many places, and while the crop is not so heavy as in some years, it is very fine and fair in yield. Corn is promising well. Farmers in the section visited are pleased with the outlook."

"I had heard so many unfavorable reports that I thought I would drive around and see, and I tell you what it is, Rock county farmers in the sections east and north of the city, are not finding fault, but are pleased with the developments of corn and tobacco during the past ten days. Many farmers have their tobacco in the shed, and others are harvesting with full force. The tobacco is ripe and in good condition for harvest."

A MERRY HEART.

Clear day or cloudy day,
Summer heat or cold,
A happy heart keeps holiday,
A merry heart is bold.
Though the wind of fortune blow
Out of wintry skies,
Face it smiling as you go—
A merry heart is wise.

By and by the sun will shine,
Day must follow night;
Darkest hour is the sign
Of returning light.
God is in his heaven still,
Though the world denies,
And cheery courage waits on will—
A merry heart is wise.

Over rugged things we climb
To our best estate;
We shall stumble many a time,
But we conquer fate.
And we choose the better part
So that evil flies,
When we keep the dauntless heart,
The merry heart that's wise.

—Mary Bradley.

THE THREAD OF FATE

He was a little man—one of sarcastic speech might have called him a toy man. He strolled into a down town broker's office two minutes after the door was opened.

"Any money for me?" he asked languidly of the head clerk.

"No, but we shall want a little if we are to carry yesterday's purchases for you any longer, sir."

The clerk handed out a slip. The little man took it, glanced at it and then, putting the paper down, drew out his checkbook.

"The stock is bound to rise before the day is over?" he asked as he pushed the check through the clerk's wicket.

"Can't say, sir."

"But what do you think?"

"I don't think, sir. It's one of the rules of the house that none but the partners may give advice or information to the customers."

"Either partner about?"

"Not just at present, sir."

"Please have me notified as soon as it touches the figure I mentioned. I will sell out promptly when it reaches the right figure. I need the money by this afternoon."

"Mr. Wheaton has your instructions, sir, and he will follow them faithfully."

The little man sauntered out, entered a nearby cafe that is famous among Wall street men, ordered a champagne cocktail and a light breakfast and leisurely disposed of it. Then he lighted a cigar and smoked it reflectively for awhile.

"Bless me, it's 10:30 already!" he murmured, coming to himself and pulling out his watch. "I must get back to the broker. Dare say he's sold my little investment for me. In that case I'll have the money all right before noon."

The same clerk was still at the little window.

"Well?" asked the little man.

"More margins," said the clerk. "That stock is going down."

"Why, yes, indeed!" murmured the plunger. "This is really a heavier margin than I paid an hour or two ago."

But he took out his checkbook. There was not the sign of a cloud on his face as he wrote the figures—$3,000.

"Here you are," he said, passing in the check. "I wish you'd ask Mr. Wheaton if he can't hurry up the deal—I believe he called it that—for this affair is getting decidedly expensive. A few more such drafts upon me will exhaust me."

The clerk paid little attention to this remark. He was accustomed to such phrases. They were a part of his daily life.

The little man went out again. On the sidewalk he paused, looking irresolutely about him.

"Wonder what I can do to kill time?" he thought. "People who spend all their time around Wall street must find it terribly hard to kill time day in and day out. It's kind of monotonous to pass all the time in that cafe, but I don't see any way out of it. I'm very sure that I couldn't become a habitue of Wall street. I should die of ennui. However, I haven't time to go up town. I must be on hand to receive the money that this investment is going to bring me."

So he wandered back to the cafe. It was too hot to eat, and besides he wasn't hungry. He ordered a small bottle and tried to drink it, but met with only indifferent success.

Yet he managed to put in an hour at the cafe. Then he rose and went back to the office.

As he entered his eye brightened and he hastened his step, for he saw Mr. Wheaton in his private office.

"Well, what news?" he asked. "Have you sold out for me?"

"The clerk has something for you," Wheaton replied.

"Not another assessment, I hope?"

"I'm sorry to say it is." The little man walked rather hurriedly out to the clerk's desk, drawing out his checkbook as he went.

He merely glanced at the slip and then wrote out the check, but there was a cloud on his face.

"I hope the tide'll turn soon," he said. "I've only got $3,100 left, and then"——

"And then?" the clerk repeated.

"Well, perhaps you don't know what it means to me."

The clerk didn't even take the trouble to ask. Hard hearted? Well, brokers' clerks don't attempt to shoulder the troubles of the world.

"When things get to this pitch," murmured the little man to himself, "I suppose it's the proper thing to watch the stock ticker. I'll be blessed, though, if I know how to do it."

He confided his difficulty to the clerk, who obligingly explained to the neophyte what the seemingly cabalistic characters on the tape were really intended to show.

"I think I understand now," said the little man. "If you don't mind, I'll stay right here beside it."

"The tape is for the convenience of our customers," replied the clerk and went back to his absorbing task over the books.

For the next hour the little man stood by the ticker reading the occasional quotations of his stock.

"It's going down gradually," he murmured. "There'll be another assessment soon. Why can't the wretched stock go up?"

Even while he was propounding this conundrum to himself the clerk approached with another of those fateful slips.

"Nine hundred? Certainly," responded the little man, and the checkbook came out once more.

There was a look of decided annoyance on his face as he returned to the instrument that was slowly, relentlessly grinding out the serial story of fortunes won and lost.

Dr. Darcy, a friend of Wheaton's, was in the office with the broker.

"I've been studying that little fellow out there," said the medical man. "He is a good illustration of the crying evils of your line of business."

The broker smiled carelessly, then yawned as if either the heat of the day or the turn of the conversation rendered him sleepy.

"The little fellow hasn't dropped all of his pile yet," he remarked. "He's pretty near the bottom, though—of his pile, I mean—and he's on a losing stock too."

"Then, why not warn him in time?" queried the doctor.

"What would be the use?" counter queried the broker. "It wouldn't do any good, and it's no business of mine, anyway."

"Wheaton, surely you are not utterly heartless!" cried the doctor. He was an enthusiastic man when he got started on some pet idea. "I repeat, why not warn this young man in time? I tell you, Wheaton, that he has neither much mental nor bodily stamina, and if you permit him to be ruined he is likely to go insane—perhaps commit some violent crime—for which you, Wheaton, who permitted him to go to his ruin, would be responsible in the eye of heaven, even if not in the minds of men. Remedy your terrible work, I say, or you may have to answer to your own conscience for a crime that I would not have on mine."

Wheaton smiled again and repeated his query, "What would be the use of it?"

"Then I will go to him myself," exclaimed the man of medicine. "I will warn him before it is too late."

"And get yourself kicked, perhaps, for meddling in another man's affairs."

"I shall speak to him, anyway, and at once."

"Darcy, you will do nothing of the sort. You are always welcome in my office, but you must not feel called upon to interfere."

Dr. Darcy arose and began to pace up and down the little private office, keeping his sympathetic gaze riveted all the time upon the hapless speculator.

Finally he exclaimed:

"There's the poor little chap signing another check."

"I dare say," replied the imperturbable broker. "His stock has been falling down stairs all day long, and I am confident that tomorrow it will go down another flight of stairs."

Dr. Darcy gazed contemptuously at the cold hearted broker who would knowingly permit such an idiotic squandering of a fortune.

At last the closing came. The little man took a look at the last quotation.

Then he bounded into the private office, shouting:

"Wheaton, it almost closed me out. But it has stopped going down for today, and I've got $300 left."

"And sense enough into the bargain to let it alone and keep hold of your balance, I hope," roared Dr. Darcy. "That stock is one of the biggest swindles in the market."

Wheaton smiled. He had been filling out a document, which he now signed and handed to the little man.

"Thanks," said the latter, pocketing the paper, with a look of supreme satisfaction. "It's a nice little profit—enough to keep me in Europe for a year or more."

With these words he was gone. Dr. Darcy turned upon the broker and demanded:

"Wheaton, what the deuce does that little snip mean? Here he has been squandering money on margins all day long, and now he says that the profits will keep him in Europe for a year."

"It means," replied the broker, "that this little fellow belongs to one of the wealthiest families in New York. He and another very rich young fellow made a bet last night as to whether 1,000 shares of that stock would eat up more than $15,000 in margins today. Each put up half of the money to be used and besides that a wager of $50,000 a side. Our young friend who has just left won by a balance of $300. So, you see, it was a very lucky investment for him."

The doctor looked as if he didn't feel well. At last he blurted out:

"Wheaton, you made a fool of me in the most approved fashion. Of course you'll dine with me tonight, and we'll wipe out this score in the best wine I can buy."—New York Journal.

The Foot of a Fly.

If the foot of a fly is put under the glass of a good microscope it may be seen how simple is the contrivance that seems able to defy the laws of gravitation. The foot is made up of two pads, covered with fine, short hairs, with a pair of curved hooks above them. Behind each pad is a tiny bag filled with clear liquid gum, the hairs also being hollow and filled with the same sticky fluid. As the fly glides rapidly over a smooth surface every step presses out a supply of gum strong enough to give him a sure footing and to sustain him in safety if he halts. So strong is the cement that upon one of his six feet is quite sufficient to sustain the weight of his whole body. If he stands still any length of time the gum is apt to dry up and harden, and so securely fasten the fly's foot as to make a sudden step snap the leg itself.

The Retort Clerical.

"Since you take me to task so roundly for my failings," said the physician, somewhat nettled, "let me ask you why you don't restrain your own son. He gambles, drinks and plays the races."

"Ah, yes," said the clergyman with a sigh. "We don't seem to exert much influence over our own families, do we? By the way, doctor, please convey my warmest sympathies to your wife and say to her I am sorry she is still unable to find any relief from her rheumatism."

THE WOMAN MODEL.

Here Is a Good Word For the Poor Male Sex.

A woman who is an artist's model by profession has lately written to the newspapers complaining of the treatment she receives from art students of her own sex for whom she poses and unstintedly praising, on the contrary, the conduct of the men artists by whom she is employed. She asserts that during a number of years of experience in the profession she has never encountered one woman artist who has treated her with commonly decent courtesy, while men have been uniformly kind and attentive. These statements are so sweeping and place so large a class of young and old women in an unamiable light that it is only fair to let it be understood that if they are true this model's experience has been an entirely unique one. Women art students, although exceedingly businesslike, are usually polite to their women models and considerate of them, in spite of the fact that many of the models take far less pains to pose well for girls than for men, being paid at the same rate—generally 50 cents an hour. The injured model, having announced that her figure is perfect and given the bust measure as 34 and the waist as 32 inches in proof of it—although the perfect woman's figure as shown in antique Greek sculpture has a far larger waist in proportion—intimates that personal jealousy is the cause of the rude treatment. She has evidently been peculiarly unfortunate in her professional engagements, for girl students are, as a rule, lavish, if discriminating, in their praise of a model's beauties and are almost unanimous in preferring women rather than men models, although the latter usually hold the pose better. All models are expected to have personal advantages of some sort; otherwise they would not be eligible to the profession, and they are far more liable to be condemned for too little than too much beauty. There is one habit which men and women students alike fall into—that of regarding the model as an object of art rather than as a human being with ears, and so discussing, praising and criticising without the least personal feeling. As far as social ostracism is concerned, all well behaved models are kindly used by well bred women, and drapery models, of which the complainant is one, are in little danger of equivocal treatment, since girl students frequently themselves pose in costume for the benefit of a mixed class and are not so unreasonable as to condemn another girl for merely doing the same thing.

SILK GINGHAM GOWN.

The sketch shows a blue silk gingham gown trimmed with ecru guipure. The collar is of white silk.

CHILDREN'S SPEECH.

A Few Timely Words For Fathers and Mothers to Remember.

It is odd to note what apparent contradictions prevail among persons of the usual amount of culture and intellectual understanding. A tolerably sure test of the true mental standard of a family is the way in which its children are reared. When they are grown up, those same children will learn to conceal their lack of real delicacy and refined tastes, but while they are small they will be a faithful indication of the influences that are molding them.

It is well known that during the first five years of a child's life it is peculiarly susceptible to educational influences, bad or good, and the foundations are laid of its future habits of thought and conduct. Yet an immense number of supposedly sensible and cultivated parents find the greatest pleasure in teaching their children, just learning to talk, vulgarities of language and manner that they would condemn in a grown person. They find a charm and piquancy in hearing a little girl 2 or 3 years old use the "tough" phrases of the slums or sing a song celebrating in the argot of thieves the feats of a celebrated burglar. The utter incongruity of the thing amuses her unthinking listeners.

Gentleness and courtesy are not so vigorous a natural growth in the average character that they require extirpating treatment while that character is still in its infancy. If a child is taught the bold impertinences of a street gamin, she is not to blame for repeating them in and out of season. The blame lies with the persons who instructed her, and who will doubtless punish her later for remembering the lesson too faithfully.

The illustration shows a little girl's frock of sky blue liberty silk. It is trimmed with a scarf trimming held in place by rosettes. The wide white collar is bordered with lace, and the short puffed sleeves are similarly finished.

HER COMMON REPLY:

"I DON'T FEEL VERY WELL."

You Hear These Words Every Day Spoken By Women You Know.

[SPECIAL TO OUR LADY READERS.]

It's in their mind all the time.
It weighs upon them, it crushes them.

They are utterly miserable.

Don't you know the reason?

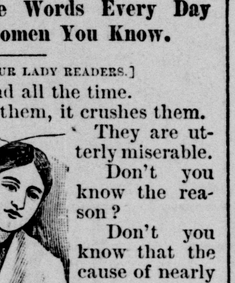
Don't you know that the cause of nearly all your trouble was discovered by a woman twenty years ago? Don't you know that from that day to this, thousands have been cured of the same life-killing tortures that now afflict you?

The words "Women's Complaints" represent misery untold, and have shortened thousands of beautiful lives.

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound comes to you with physical salvation; nothing like it ever came into the lives of women. It relieves at once, and cures all the miseries that result from displacement and derangement of the womb.

Hear what this woman who once suffered and is now well says. Can proof be greater?

"All I have to say is, any woman who continues to suffer with any of those trying diseases peculiar to our sex is largely responsible for her own suffering, for if she will only apply to Mrs. Pinkham, relief will follow at once. This I know absolutely from my own personal experience. Her Vegetable Compound is a miracle. I have seen it cure womb troubles when all the wisest doctors failed.



"My sisters, don't hesitate. Write at once; relief is waiting for you."—MRS. JENNIE STREET, San Francisco, Cal.
